Working with Multilingual Populations Minor

The minor in Working with Multilingual Populations provides students with the knowledge, practical experience, and intercultural competence needed to engage effectively with linguistically and culturally diverse communities across professional settings. Through coursework in language learning, linguistics, literacy, and language in society, students explore how language functions across social and professional contexts. Emphasis is placed on applied, career-relevant, and community-based learning experiences that connect research and practice in education, speech, and related human-service fields.
