The Department of Health Behavior, Policy, and Management is dedicated to shaping future leaders in health behavior, policy, management, and research. We tackle critical population and organizational challenges through a blend of innovative education, cutting-edge research, and practical application. Our health behavior experts are committed to advancing public health by addressing the root causes of health issues. Meanwhile, our health policy and management specialists focus on creating evidence-based solutions to systemic challenges, preparing the next generation of healthcare administrators, policymakers, and researchers to ensure accessible, high-quality care for all.
